Announcing Day 1 Keynote Speaker

We are pleased to announce that Maggie Hamilton is our Day 1 Keynote Speaker.

Maggie is a well-known Author, Social Researcher And Publisher and has published the following well-known books.

Many of our relationships at home and at work, as well as in our communities are struggling. What, then, are the best ways back to belonging, and what might a more engaged community look like?

In line with our conference theme Recovery in a post covid world – The three Rs of education law: Regulation, Re-engagement and Risk management, Maggie will bring some insights into how as adults, we can re-engage with our work, our colleagues, and workplaces as well family, friends and community.

Early Bird Registration extended until 16 September 2022

ANZELA is a not-for profit organisation and when hosting the National Conference, we endeavour to keep registration fees as low as we are able. We aim to support our membership base and those interested in Education Law to come together at the conference to network, discuss matters of interest and to inform each other about matters that they have researched, come across or experienced in the course of their work.

To show our support to members, who continued to support us during 2020 & 2021, we have extended our early bird conference registration until 16 September 2022.

For those who are not current members, we have also extended the early bird non-member registration until this date too. The non-members conference fee includes an individual ANZELA membership until 29 February 2024.

Professional Development Opportunities

ANZELA is pleased to circulate information about the upcoming 2022 Student Voice Symposium.

The 2022 Student Voice Australia Symposium will bring together staff and students from Australian higher education institutions to examine the positionality and role of students as essential partners in decision-making and governance now and into the future.

We are thrilled to be joined by three international scholars to keynote this year's Symposium: Dr Manja Klemenčič (Harvard University), who will speak about student agency, and Lovisa Håkansson and Dr Ulrike Schnaas (Uppsala University), who will explore institutional-wide practices that foster democratic sustainable futures at and beyond the university.

Dr Sharlene Leroy-Dyer (University Queensland) will facilitate a discussion with passionate students about the importance of student engagement around equity, diversity and inclusion on Day 1, and Day 2 will showcase stories from the field in our presenter streams.

Across the two days, we are also offering two SVA member exclusive workshops: the first with Dr Mollie Dollinger (Deakin) and Dr Aidan Cornelius-Bell (UniSA), and the second with Simon Varwell and Stef Black from sparqs.
